SATAN GOETH A FISHING.

The devil sat by the river side—
The stream of time, where you'll always find him—
Casting his line in the rushing tide
And landing the fish on the bank behind him.

He sat at ease in a cosy nook,
And was filling his basket very fast;
While you might have seen that his deadly hook
Was differently baited for every cast.

He caught 'em fast as a man could count;
Little or big, it was all the same.
One bait was a cheque for a round amount;
A Congressman nabbed it and out he came.

He took a gem that as Saturn shone;
It sank in the water without a sound,
And caught a woman who long was known
As the best and purest for miles around.

Sometimes he would laugh, and sometimes sing,
For better luck no one could wish;
And he seemed to know to a dead sure thing
The bait best suited every fish.

Quoth Satan, "The fishing is rare and fine,"
And he took a drink somewhat enthused;
And yet a parson swam round the line
That e'en the most tempting of baits refused.

He tried with his gold and his flashing gems,
Hung fame and fortune upon the line
Dressing gowns with embroidered hems,
But still, the dominie made no sign.

A woman's garter went on the hook;
"I have him at last," quoth the devil bright-
ening;
And Satan's sides with laughter shook.
As he lauded the preacher as quick as lightning.

Defending the Sex.

Clara Belle, in her last letter to the Cincinnati Enquirer, says "there seems to be a vast difference, to men's eyes, between the tweedle-dee of an outer dress and the tweedle-dum of under-clothing. I can't understand why, but it is so. Nine men out of ten will rush wildly to a window to see a woman in flowing white across the way and turn away disappointed when they find that the snowy garment is a wrapper instead of a chemise."

We rally to the defense of our sex. We scorn Clara Belle or anyone who believes the above statement.

An equally false and wicked notion prevails relative to bald-headed men who go to the ballet and sit next to the musicians, within seven feet of the stage. The cruel charge that bald-headed men sit on the front row of seats at this class of literary exercises from any wrong motive, has done an incalculable amount of harm. It has hurt our own feelings many times and caused the ready tear to unbidden start. It has cast a gloom over our whole lives and embittered the cup of our joy many times.

Bald-headed men are dealt with unjustly in this matter. So far as we are concerned we are free to say that we sit on the front row so that we can hear the soft low notes of the bass viol. We are madly, passionately fond of the musical throbs of the large fiddle, and shall we be hooted and jeered on the public streets for this cause? Shall we be named mockingly by the mob because we yearn for the glad snort of the bass tuba and the mellow notes of the triangle? We hope not.

Clara Belle is a little too harsh and too anterior. She writes sarcastically and does not regard the feelings of those she thus cruelly stabs.

We should never speak disrespectfully of the bald-headed. We do not know how soon we may be bald-headed ourselves.

There is a case in history somewhere, although we have not the leisure at present to turn to it, where some hoodlums had a whole menagerie turned loose on them for speaking lightly of a bald-headed gentleman. We should learn from this never to attack the man who parts his hair with a towel, for in an unguarded moment he may climb as with a lawn mower and knock us beyond the purple hills. —Nye's Boomerang.

Mid-Day Revelations of the New Comet.

The observations made on Wells' comet at the Dudley Observatory during its meridian passage are exceedingly valuable. The character of the nucleus of great comets has long been a matter of controversy. Last summer Prof. Draper concluded, from observations on the great comet of 1881, that the nucleus was either a solid or a liquid. Long ago Prof. Pierce, of Harvard, concluded from his observations that the nucleus of a comet is a solid body of metallic density. The observations made at Albany tend to support the theory of Prof. Pierce.

Wells' comet at noonday on the 11th showed a well-defined disc like a planet or asteroid. The best theory of the constitution of the tails of comets is that they are of electric origin, being the results of excitation as the nucleus approaches the sun. The nucleus is undoubtedly opaque, being in reality an unfortunate world compelled by an accident of birth to wander in the celestial spaces in a manner that forbids the development of animal life on its surface. The near approach of many comets, among them Wells', to the sun, undoubtedly causes rapid disintegration. One has been known to split in pieces. Prof. Stone, of Cincinnati, thought he saw the nucleus of the great comet of last summer divide, and then come together again.

Prof. Boss finds from his mid-day observations with the transit instrument that the orbit is very nearly a parabola, and there is little prospect that the comet will ever return to the sun. A dispatch to Prof. Boss from Lord Crawford, at Dun Echt, Scotland, helps somewhat to explain the failure of the comet to fulfill expectations as to brightness. Spectroscopic examinations by Dr. Lohse revealed a sharp bright line, coincident with the sodium in the solar spectrum, also strong indications of other bright lines. This, with the actual observation of a disc sixteen hours after perihelion passage, when the vapors were hot and transparent, indicates a solid body. As soon as the comet began to leave the sun the vapors began to condense so the disc was not again visible. Prof. Boss thinks the presence of sodium accounts for the failure to throw off a tail of great length. Other comets have shown the spectrum of hydro-carbon, but this one is of a different composition. —Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat.

Marriages.

A man should marry by all means; yet I am convinced the greater part of marriages are unhappy, and this is not an opinion that I give as coming from myself; it is that of a very excellent, agreeable and sensible lady, who married the man of her choice, and has not encountered ostensibly any extraordinary misfortune, as loss of health, riches, children, etc. She told me this unreservedly, and I never had any reason to doubt her sincerity. For all this, I am convinced a man can not be truly happy without a wife. It is a strange state of things we live in. A tendency so natural as that of the union of the sexes ought to lead only to the most harmonious results; yet the reverse is the fact. There is certainly something radically wrong in the constitution of society; the times are out of joint. It is strange, too, what little real liberty of choice is exercised by those even who marry according to what is thought their own inclinations. The deceptions which the two sexes play off upon each other bring as many ill-sorted couples into the bonds of Hymen as ever could be done by the arbitrary pairings of a legal match-maker. Many a man thinks he marries by choice who only marries by accident; in this respect men have less the advantage of women than is generally supposed. —Lord Byron.

BIG SANDY RIVER, in Kentucky, gets an appropriation of $25,000—enough to put a tin roof over the river, so the sun will not dry it up during the dog-days.—Milwaukee Republican Sentinel.

The above is intended for wit, but really it is an exhibition of the lamentable ignorance of the paper publishing it. Instead of throwing ridicule on Congress for voting the appropriation to the Big Sandy, the writer of it is simply ridiculous in his provincial sectionalism.

The Big Sandy River has its source in old Virginia, and runs between West Virginia and Kentucky, and debouches in the Ohio—its waters reaching the Ohio shore. It is thus, to all intents, a "national" river, even in the strictest construction of the term. It is navigable for at least one hundred miles from its mouth for steam vessels of two hundred and fifty tons capacity, and many of them are constantly running on it, and it is generally navigable when the Ohio river is navigable. It has along its banks and tributaries as fine timber and coal as there is in the world. Last year its outgoing commerce amounted to nearly two millions of dollars, to say nothing of the great amount of supplies sent up it. Its coal fields are sufficient to supply the West bordering on the Ohio, and the South bordering on the Mississippi. The whole South and West, as well as the territory immediately along its banks, are interested in the improvement of its navigation. Its mouth is three hundred and ten miles lower down on the Ohio than Pittsburg, and then, if perfectly improved, it can supply the West and South with much needed coal and timber, when in times of ice and drouth it cannot be gotten from Pittsburg. There are many other productions of great necessity and value that come from the Big Sandy other than coal and timber. All that is needed is to properly improve its navigation, as with the Ohio and Mississippi, and the outlet for its productions will be greatly bettered and the people dependant on its productions will be greatly benefitted.

This is the river the improvement of which is attempted to be ridiculed by the writer of the paper above. He is simply to be pitied. He does not know what he does, or is controlled by a miserable sectional hostility to Kentucky. Will the Washington Post, in which we find the above, please publish this article.

A reunion of the Colored National Guard of the United States will be held at Columbus August 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18. It is expected that more than five hundred representatives of colored companies will be present.

The Senate on Monday confirmed the nominations of General Grant and W. H. Trescott, commissioners to negotiate a commercial treaty with Mexico; John A. Luby surveyor of the port of Albany, New York, and Colonel Charles H. Crane surgeon general U. S. A. A number of other nominations were also confirmed.

The bridge across the Embarras river, on the Peoria, Decatur and Evansville Railroad, near Greenup, Sunday evening, gave way under a freight train, and the engine and eighteen loaded cars went down, killing Chas. Allen, a coppersmith, and seriously injuring M. B. Contin, engineer, and George Forten, brakeman. The bridge was defective.

The sidewheel Anchor Line steamer, Gold Dust, bound from Vicksburg for St. Louis, exploded and burned to the water's edge, and sunk in the Mississippi two hundred yards above Hickman, Ky. Seventeen are known to have been killed and forty-seven wounded. The captain was slightly wounded. A tug with physicians were sent to the scene of the disaster from Cairo.

Congress has authorized to act during recess, the special joint committee of the two houses to find out what is the matter with American commerce. The house has authorized the ways and means committee to meet in November and receive the report of the tariff commission, with a view to the preparation of a tariff revision bill, and the senate has authorized the committee on education and labor to look into the relations between labor and capital.

Admiral Seymour gives the following account of Saturday's skirmish: "Our force consisted of two hundred men, a naval brigade, with one forty-pounder and two nine-pounder guns, under Captain Fisher; a thousand marines under Colonel Tson; half a battalion of the 38th and 46th regiments, and all the 60th regiment. We had a skirmish with the enemy, which was two thousand strong, with six guns and six rockets from half past 5 until half past 7 o'clock in the evening. Total casualties to the naval brigade and marines, two killed and twenty-two wounded."

Every state and district candidate on the Democratic ticket was elected on Monday. Jacob received very few Democratic votes and fell very short of receiving the solid Republican support. Henry's majority is estimated at about 30,000.

Deering Camp Meeting.

Monday's and Tuesday's Proceedings—Sermons by Revs. M. D. Reynolds, J. K. Deering, W. T. Rowland, W. F. Taylor and Dr. Hendrix.

Camp Notes General and Personal.

From our Special Correspondent.

Prayer is that passion of the soul clamoring to God whilst everything else is forgotten. It must take hold of the petitioner before it takes hold of God.

Rev. M. D. Reynolds, of Maysville, Ky., preached at 3 p. m.

The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life. St. John 6:3.

The speaker stated that in order to a correct understanding of these words it is necessary to know something of the audience addressed. Words taken out of the time, place and condition of their utterance are, not infrequently, misconstrued. Especially is the danger of misconstruction from this source great in what may be called the discursive or sermonic portions of the Bible. Here an audience is addressed, and to look at the discourse without the audience were to fail in a rule of correct interpretation. The audience was in Capernaum. It had gathered about Christ, not because of a belief in his miraculous power which fed them, but because they "did eat of the loaves and fishes." It was composed of a thrifless, ignorant, hungry set, before whose eyes the loaves and fishes were far more important than the supernatural power of Jesus. What was Christ to do, then, with such an audience? Evidently to lift their minds out of this groveling state and to turn them away from the body and its appetites.

They were bread lovers nearly always hungry. This appetite was made the basis of a teaching of spiritual import.

Christ preached Himself unto them as the "bread which cometh down from Heaven." His discourse was figurative. His figure based on the fact of bread. The words of the text being in this discourse are to be interpreted in a figurative sense revealing or pointing to Christ as the source of spiritual life.

There is too much emphasis sometimes put upon biblical criticism. The words of the bible are often magnified above Christ.

They are only important as they reveal Him. God wants us to think of the words of the Bible as John thought of Christ. "He must increase but I must decrease."

The language of the Scripture is to be lost sight of in the full presence of Christ, whom it reveals.

The remainder of the discourse was in answer to the question "what is the life which Christ gives?"

There were in this sermon gems of thought and many passages of exquisite finish.

Sermon at 8 p. m., by Rev. J. K. Deering, Text: Come now and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. Isa. 1:18 He stated that Isaiah, the author of this text, lived in the midst of a people degenerate and almost wholly corrupt. The language, however, was not to be confined to them but is applicable to all sinners. The subject was treated under two heads. 1st. What does it mean? 2nd. What does it require?

The text demands that every sinner shall consider and reason in regard to his sins both in relation to the law and the effect on his own life. Sin separates the soul from God. Parties estranged to be reconciled must be brought together. God and the sinner must come together and reason about the estrangement. This reasoning about his sins leads a sinner to see them as never before. When the sinner meets God and confesses his sins then the text requires that God should forgive him.

It promises the pardon of the greatest sins. Red is the deepest color, hardest to be removed, yet this is to be made white as snow. No color deeper than red, nothing whiter than snow. This shows God's willingness to forgive the greatest of sinners.

TUESDAY.

Morning worship was conducted by the Rev. W. T. Rowland. The devotional meeting was led by the Rev. Jos. Kand. At this meeting many witnesses bore testimony for Christ.

The aged and the young, alike spoke of the preciousness of the religion of Jesus.

This religion does effect the lives of men now and is still a power in the world. The testimony of such persons would be received in any court of justice respecting worldly matters. It is equally credible respecting religion.

The sermon to the children was preached by the Rev. W. F. Taylor; text, Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile. Psalm 34:13.

The speaker referred to the philosopher who ordered respectively the best and the worst dish when expecting guests. In each instance tongues, and nothing but tongues, were served up. The servants explained when an astonished inquiry was made that the tongue is both the best and the worst thing in the universe, for, therewith we bless God and curse men. The worst use of the tongue was made to represent backbiting, lying, swearing. 2. The best use—singing and praising God.

At 11 a. m., Dr. Hendrix preached from the words, But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

Acts 1:8—Treated substantially as follows:

The creed of every branch of Christ's church and of each believer is, "I believe in the Holy Ghost." This creed was early formulated. He deprecated the prevalent custom of using the word it with reference to the holy spirit. This word is never so used in the bible. Gibbons reason for the spread of christianity were cited and shown to be insufficient since all these requisites were possessed by the apostles who were destitute of power until they received the fulfillment of the promise. Learning, splendid music, all appliances inadequate to accomplish the work of saving souls unless the Holy Spirit works in convicting and converting power. The ancients supposed fire a secret from the Gods. The secret of all the churches success is the fire of the Holy Spirit. This power manifests itself in a witnessing church. The symbol of this fire among men is the human tongue. The human tongue must be moved by the Holy Spirit. This gift of power is bestowed upon us in answer to prayer.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mr. Henry Smoot, we are glad to say, is better.

Miss J. R. Parke is visiting friends at Indianapolis.

Mrs. Henry Green, Miss Sallie Kane, and Miss Maggie Green, are visiting at Lexington.

Miss Lizzie Clark, of Cincinnati, left for Flemingsburg this morning.

Col. T. A. Respass and Mrs. A. C. Respass and family have returned from Esculapia.

Miss Bodie L. Montjoy, of Lexington, Mo., is visiting Mrs. Anna L. Montjoy, of this city.

Major Geo. T. Browning, formerly of this county, died last week at St. Paul, Minn. His wife who died a few years ago, was a daughter of the late John A. M. Clung.

LEXINGTON has subscribed about $40,000 for the establishment of a watch factory there.

It is said that the Rev. R. M. Gano, of Kentucky, has just made $40,000 in a land trade in Texas.

THE wheat crop of the United States is now estimated at 300,000,000 bushels. Only half of this will be needed for home consumption.

MESSRS. BROOKS & PARKER are talking of starting two street omnibusses to run from the cemetery to the west end. The enterprise, it seems to us, if properly inaugurated and conducted would be a profitable one. But Messrs. Brooks & Parker ought not to make the mistake of charging too high a rate of fare. At a low price the omnibusses would be filled all the time, otherwise they are likely to be empty.

The Boston Herald is of the opinion that General Butler can have the Democratic nomination for Governor if he will take it "straight," but that there is likely to be opposition to his desire for nomination by the Independents, with Democratic indorsement.

Ancient Arts.

Ground is so precious in London, or its owners are so grasping, that the most interesting relics of antiquity are not permitted to cumber it. One of the last remaining fragments of the old Roman wall has been removed. Though exposed to the wear and tear of elements for considerably more than a thousand years, the mortar was found to be so tough and strong that the workmen were actually compelled to cut out the stone as if they had been in the original quarry. Mortar makers and stone-masons nowadays might take lessons from their remote predecessors, whose ideas of durability seem to have been quite different from those prevailing at present. It is said that the stones of the Pyramids—compared with which the London wall is a thing of yesterday—are laid in mortar no thicker than a sheet of paper, and yet remain so firmly fixed after the lapse of thirty or forty centuries that the thinnest knife-blade cannot be inserted between them. These ancient Egyptians, then, could learn nothing from us in that line of business; but we might learn a vast deal from them. Even the ruins of their buildings make modern architects ashamed. What must those buildings have been in the pride of their youth and strength? The stateliest structures of London, Paris and New York are mere card-houses in comparison with the temples and palaces which once lined the banks of the Nile. Abraham and Moses saw grander specimens of architecture in Egypt than can be seen in our own time anywhere on the face of the earth. The Rothschilds with all their money, cannot buy such mechanical skill as their ancestors in Egyptian bondage witnessed, and probably assisted. If the art of building is not lost, it has at least woefully degenerated, and might be rediscovered to the profit of all concerned. Yet in the face of these facts, which every school-boy is supposed to know, a gentleman whose profession is usually accompanied by a reasonable amount of learning recently said in a public address in our city, that no valuable inventions had ever been given to the world outside of Christianity. What could he have been thinking of? Certainly not of what he was saying. The arch, for instance, was invented nobody knows when or by whom; but, at the very lowest calculation, thousands of years before the Christian era. The immense masses of stone of which the Pyramids are composed were lifted to their places by machinery of which we know nothing. Who invented it? We cannot even get out such stones as can be seen to-day in abandoned Egyptian quarries. Who invented the art of quarrying? A small lens, such as might have been used in a rude telescope, has been found among the rubbish of Nineveh. Who invented that? The bricks of which Nineveh and Babylon were built are in fair preservation to-day, and most of our knowledge of the Chaldeans and their institutions is derived from inscriptions on clay tablets. Who invented the art of brick-making, and the stamping of letters and figures in clay? The Greeks had the art of manipulating marble in such supreme perfection that the best of our sculpture is but a miserable imitation of theirs. Yet the Greeks were not Christians. The Pompeian frescoes are mosaics—are far more beautiful, as well as more lasting, than ours. Yet they were not done by Christians. It is now believed that gunpowder and the mariner's compass, and other important inventions, including the germ of the printing-press were known in China long before Europe obtained them. Yet the Chinese were not and are not Christians. There is too much of this "zeal without knowledge." It does no good, and indirectly, not a little harm. "Let justice be done," even to the ancient heathen, "though the heavens fall."—St. Louis Republican.

—A Hartford (Conn.) firm has in process of construction a Burr index for the Government Pension Office at Washington, which is probably the largest index ever made. There will be fifty volumes of six hundred 14x20-inch pages each, and there will be spaces for indexing 1,500,000 names. The volumes will be bound in full sheep, with Russia leather ends and bands, and the cost of the set will be about $2,000.—Chicago Times.
